This long narrow table's dragon carved spandrels are of the more decorative style found in the late Qing Dynasty in Shanxi Province.

Its major design and decorative feature is the spandrels' elaborate pierced carvings of scrolled dragons. The symbolism represents power, good fortune, with strong association with the Emperor.

This ornate carving is offset by the scroll like everted ends, graduated moulding and elegant carving found in the panels between the legs. The strong foot base visually and physically anchors the table.
